

09/806,563

GR 98 P 2788

Abstract

Method for testing subscriber access lines

The test is carried out locally, online and virtually all the time with the assistance of the digital signal processor for the subscriber line. The test results are gathered at a central point and are signaled from there, when required, to specific locations in the subscriber access network, for example to a distribution node where maintenance work is currently being carried out.

Figure 2